To the friends of Temperance and the public generally we now make our appeal in behalf of this paper. The publisher feeling it a matter of importance to the interest of the Temperance cause in the District, as well as the general interest of the cause, and having been, as he conceives, Presidentially placed in a situation at this time when he can mingle this interest with that of the business men, and thereby render a double service to the community, and still further open a medium of communication by which our principles may be extended far and wide, at a cheap rate, he has purchased a printing establishment, so as not only to be able to put a daily paper regularly to press, but also a weekly; and still further, be able to do any other printing the public may be pleased to have done; and he assures them that they shall have no cause of complaint. He has made arrangements by which he can devote his time to the interest of the office and the paper; and, having employed Mr. Charles W.
Fenton, who will be always on the spot, to conduct the printing, he has no doubt but that general satisfaction will be given. We shall make arrangements to have the earliest news; also the proceedings of Congress.

We wish all who are indebted for the paper up to this time to pay up, as the affairs of the tri-weekly must be closed. They will perceive that we are about to give them a better paper, double the number, at the same price.

While the "COLUMBIAN FOUNTAIN" will be devoted to the cause of Temperance, its columns will be enriched by original articles on subjects calculated to interest, instruct, and benefit its readers. It is intended so to blend variety, amusement, and instruction, as that the various tastes of its patrons may be (as far as it is practicable) gratified.
Commerce, Literature, and Science, and every other subject of interest, not inconsistent with Temperance and morality, will receive the earnest attention of the publisher.
Nothing of a sectarian, political, or personal character will be admitted.

Mountains.

"Nature is beautiful to all, but doubly so to him who sees in every tree, and herb, and fruit, and flower, a gift of God to man.
In his eyes the arch of heaven assumes a brighter blue, the woods are painted with a richer green, and the loveliest forms of created things appear still more lovely.
The further I have wandered in this world of wonders, the more deeply have I been impressed with the power, the wisdom, and the goodness of its Creator; nor would I willingly cross moor or mountain, hill or valley, without bending my knees, or lifting up my heart in thanksgiving to the bounteous bestower of every good and perfect gift."

Such were the words of the traveler, as he sat with Mr. Lovel and his three sons, in the arbour of the beautiful garden of Elm-grove house.

The traveler was a man of thoughtful cast, and, unlike the generality of persons who have visited distant countries, little disposed to indulge in discourse, unless applied to for information by those around him. This disposition to remain silent was, however, hardly ever observable when young people were with him; for then, with a glow of good humor on his intelligent face, he freely related the wonderful things which he had seen in his travels, and appeared to delight in the pleasure visible in the sparkling eyes of his youthful hearers. He was a man of great knowledge and decided piety, and so agreeably connected his observations on the goodliness of this world with the glory of the next, that his remarks were as edifying as they were interesting.

Mr. Lovel had asked his guest to give his sons some account of the different mountains of the earth. Leonard, the youngest of the three boys, had climbed upon the traveler's knee; and Edmund and Gilbert were gazing with the most fixed attention, while he thus commenced his observations:

"I hope, my dear young friends, that I shall succeed in giving you pleasure and instruction. As you have only been accustomed to ascend the hills of the surrounding neighborhood, you can form but a very imperfect idea of the high towering mountains of other countries, whose heads are covered with constant snows, and against whose broad breasts the storm bursts with unrelenting fury. In ascending these, the traveler mounts above the clouds, hears the thunder rolling, and sees the lightning flash beneath his feet. Such vast objects and sublime scenes impress the thoughtful mind with the wondrous and almighty power of God. Thousands of years have these great elevations been standing; but though such a period may be great to us, it is not so with their great Creator, for 'one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.'" "There is only one consequence that I have reason to fear from your relation of mountains," said Mr. Lovel, "and that is, lest my boys should all take it into their heads to set off on their travels to see the places you describe. Now, three travelers in one family will never do. How is this affair to be managed Edmund?"

Edmund. Let us first hear of the mountains, if you please, father, and settle the affair of our travels afterwards.

Traveler. In describing the mountains I shall not keep back the danger which exists in ascending and descending them; and this may, perhaps, appear greater than my three young friends may like to encounter.

There are so many mountains in this world, celebrated for one thing or another, that it would take a week to describe them; all, therefore, that I can do is to say something of the most remarkable among them.
Many an hour have I toiled up their steep sides, worn and weary, panting for breath, and heartily wishing myself at the summit; but when that was gained, it abundantly rewarded me for all my pains. In Britain,

I have toiled up the steep of Ben Nevis, Cadair Idris, a bleak Pennan-mawr;
The broad breast of proud Snowden and Skiddaw, And the shivering sides of Mam Tor.

Admiring his wondrous creation, Who rules o'er the earth and the sky,
"How great are his power and his glory!
Alas! what an atom am I!"

Nothing strikes us more forcibly with a sense of our own littleness than the sight of a broad-breasted, high-towering mountain; for we are such grains of sand in comparison with it, that we cannot but be struck with the amazing difference. A man or a boy may be filled with pride so long as he moves among his fellow creatures; but when he goes forth into the wide world, ascending its mountains, traversing its plains, and crossing its mighty waters; he learns to form a more humble estimate of himself. He is such a speck in existence, that the vanity of his heart is reproved by the immensity of the works of God. The Cesars and Alexanders of the world, in all their pride, cannot but be struck with their insignificance, when gazing on a mountain, a rushing river, a mighty torrent, or a volcano. The mountains of Europe and Africa are not so high as those of Asia and America; but perhaps I had better first mention some of those of our own country. The highest mountain in the British Isles is Ben Nevis, in Scotland, being something more than 4000 feet above the sea, or about four-fifths of a mile.

Now, if you can imagine twenty church spires piled up one upon another, you will form some notion of the height of Ben Nevis. Snowden, Cadair Idris, and Penman-mawr, are the loftiest mountains in Wales.
In ascending them, and Skiddaw, in Cumberland, I was much struck with their great height and gigantic bulk, not having then witnessed the stupendous mountains of other countries. In ascending a mountain we are not always affected in proportion to its height. When in a grateful mood, we have frequently more enjoyment in climbing to the top of a common hill, than in visiting the summit of the highest mountain, if the mind is not alive to the surrounding sublimity. I remember, on one occasion, when on the top of Malvern Hills, being so struck with the beautiful appearance of the heavens and earth, that I suddenly fell on my knees and burst into tears. The words and works of the Most High declared both his goodness and his glory.

COAL! COAL!!

NOW is the time! Just arrived and now landing a small vessel load (90 tons) of Coal, (Anthraxite) from Philadelphia. Those in want of a good article of this kind of fuel will please apply early, as it would be preferred to deliver it from the vessel, without stowing it. Apply to the undersigned, at his Lumber and Coal Yard, on 7th street, near Centre Market—where all kinds of Lumber, with Lime, Cement, and Calcinced Plaster, may be had cheap for cash or short credit.

The course of studies in Pennsylvania College is as extensive and substantial as that of any institution in the country. The Preparatory Department provides for instruction in all the branches of a thorough English business education, in addition to the Elements of the Mathematics and Classical Literature. The College course is arranged in the four classes usual in the institutions of this country.

The government of the students is as energetic as their circumstances seem to require. They attend at least two recitations a day, and the Faculty contemplate increasing them to three, Church and Bible Class on the Sabbath, and are visited in their rooms so frequently as to preclude the danger of any great irregularities. It is believed no institution in the United States has more exemplary young men in connexion with it. They are all required to lodge in the College edifice, special cases excepted.

The annual expenses are—for board, tuition and room rent, during the winter session $61 87 1-2; for the summer session, $41 87 1-2; washing, $10; wood, $3 00. Total expense, $116 75. Boarding can be had in town at $1 25 per week.

There are two vacations in the year, commencing on the third Thursdays of April and September; each of five weeks continuance.

The summer session will commence on Thursday, the 22d of May. The annual commencement takes place on the third Thursday in September.

The Trustees have recently made various arrangements which will increase the efficiency of the Institution. They have increased the number of Professors and provided for the most ample instruction of the students.

Professor Baugher and Haupt are prepared to board boys and to exercise a special supervision over their studies and deportment, and Parents who may prefer placing their sons under their care, will be secure in regard to their proper management, under arrangements such as pertain to the family circle.

view, embraces every subject connected with Commerce, Manufactures and Political Economy, as follows: Commercial Legislation; Commercial History and Geography; Mercantile Biography; Descriptive, Statistical and Historical Accounts, of the various commodities which form the subject of Mercantile transactions; Port Charges; Tariffs; Customs and Excise Regulations; Commercial Statistics of the United States and the different countries of the world, with which we have intercourse, including their Physical Character, Population, Productions, Exports, Imports, Seaports, Monies, Weights, Measures, Finance and Banking Associations, and Enterprises connected with Commerce, embracing Fisheries, Incorporated Companies, Railroads, Canals, Steamboats, Docks, Post Offices, &c.; Principles of Commerce, Finance and Banking; with Practical and Historical Details and Illustrations; Commercial Law, and Mercantile Law Reports and Decisions of Courts in the United States and Europe, including Insurance, Partnership, Principal and Agent, Bills of Exchange, Sale, Guaranty, Bankruptcy, Shipping and Navigation, &c., and whatever else shall tend to develop the resources of the country and the world, and illustrate the various topics bearing upon Commerce and Commercial Literature.

It has been, and will continue to be, the aim of the Editor and Proprietor of the Merchants' Magazine, to avoid everything of a party, political, or sectional bias or bearing, in the conduct of the work—opening its pages to the free and fair discussion of antagonistic doctrines connected with the great interests of Commerce, Agriculture, Manufactures and the Currency.

Complete sets of the Merchants' Magazine, embracing 12 semi-annual volumes, of about 600 large octavo pages each, bringing it down to June, 1844, inclusive, may be obtained at the Publisher's Office, 142 Fulton street, New York, at the subscription price.

Publishers of newspapers in the United States, by giving this advertisement two or three insertions and remitting Two Dollars to the Proprietor, will be entitled to the Magazine for one year.
